The Other Side of Things—An Illustration.

A recent incident so well illustrates the right use of the power to deceive that it is worth the telling. In a Sunday-school, in a church not a thousand miles from New York, the pastor, is a teacher of a class of young ladies. Another teacher, a woman of strong imagination, feeling that the air of the room was oppressive, sought the pastor and complained that she couldn't breathe, and wondered if the ventilator was open. The pastor expressed his sympathy, and promised to have the janitor look after the matter, and the distressed woman returned to her class hopeful.

Now the pastor knew the ventilator was wide open and working well, and the air seemed to him to be of good quality. However, he beckoned to the janitor and said in a whisper, "Miss—think the air bad, so I wish you would go to the ventilator ropes (in full sight) and pull and fiddle with them a bit; then Miss—will be able to breathe." The janitor did so, and the distressed woman was at once relieved.

To have told her that the ventilator was wide open and working well, and that the air was certainly good, would not have relieved her at all. The pastor's deceit, aided by that of the janitor, accomplished a kindly benefit to one who was in real distress, for imaginary ill as it is as painful as those of any other sort. Had those two men connived to harm some one by practicing a deceit, their act would have been blameworthy. As it was it can only be classed as praiseworthy.

Perhaps no one day of the year is more difficult for parents in the matter of teaching children the difference between right and wrong than "April Fool." However, the one test straightens out every item of that difficult day. Teach the child to consider whether his deceit is intended by him or by her to make for the comfort or happiness or helpfulness of the one upon whom the joke is played. If so, good is intended, and if the intent is good, is accomplished. If the intention be to cause discomfort, annoyance, or disturbance of the one upon whom the joke is planned, then the deceit is harmful in its intention, and can only be classed as wrong.

Too many "April Fool" deceits (as well as others) are planned and carried out without any thought of the comfort or well-being of the one who is to be deceived. Therefore, rightly used, "April Fool" affords the best opportunity of any one day in the whole year of teaching children (and ourselves) the right and the wrong use of the power to deceive. However, every day has its opportunities for that teaching.

The Benefits of Parks.

A Citizens' Park Committee has been organized in Montclair for the furthering of a favorable vote for the issue of $100,000 of park bonds by the town of Montclair. In an address to the voters the following is one of a number of reasons given why the people should vote in favor of the parks:

"The adoption of the entire program submitted will give us in Montclair, including parks already established, a total park area of 120 acres, equal to three per cent. of the area of the town, or about one acre for each 140 of the present population. When we have the same density of population as the adjoining city of Orange, the park and playground area in Montclair would be one acre for each 450 inhabitants. And as the need for open spaces increases the possibility of obtaining them disappears.

"Now an additional bond issue of one hundred thousand dollars will cost the town annually to interest less than four thousand dollars; but the enhanced value of property, not only in the immediate proximity of the proposed parks, but throughout the entire town, will yield, in taxes, an amount greatly in excess of this slightly increased fixed charge. As an illustration of how a park increases the value of real estate in its immediate proximity, we might point to the development which has recently taken place near the junction of Harrison avenue and Orange road. Fourteen new lots have been brought into the market, although the park is not yet completed, and this means that fourteen new properties, with improvements, will shortly be put upon the tax books of the town and will yield an income practically sufficient to pay the interest required on the total park bond issue.

"But in addition to the new value developed immediately surrounding the parks there will be a considerable general increase of value throughout the entire town, which will, of course, benefit all of our property owners and citizens, and will tend to reduce taxes.

"If these various facts are not acquired now for park purposes it is not likely that they or any other ever will be, for real estate values are increasing very rapidly in Montclair, and this land would be too expensive for park purposes at a later time, even if it could be secured then. Unimproved property is rapidly being cut up into small building lots.

"Montclair has grown more rapidly and favorably than other suburban towns in the past, because of the public spirit and wise foresight shown by its founders in deciding such questions as this. Let us not now retard this favorable development of Montclair by the exercise of less public spirit or wisdom in deciding this important question."

Library Notes.
The librarian's report for March shows the record broken for circulation both daily and monthly. The daily circulation reached 212, while the total circulation for March was 3,151. The fiction in greatest demand is "The Wheel of Life," "In Old Belaire," and "The House of 1,000 Candles."

"Children of the Mist," by Philpotts, is one of the new books which one feels repaid for reading. There is a logical evolution of character which is extremely interesting, and the bits of description and local coloring are graceful without being weak. There is a rugged strength about the book which is wholesome, and all of the characters are very human—a remark which is not characteristic of the dramatic personae of recent fiction as a whole.

Mrs. John Lane gives us a bright little volume of essays which takes its title from the name of the first, "The Champagne Standard." This scores the "cheap pretence which is so humorously characteristic of modern society. Nothing else so accurately describes the insouciance pretensions and frothy striving after one's little private unattainables. It is aspiration turned sour." The author then gives her view-point of England versus America in kitchen, drawing-room, and in public, with a graceful tribute to the American girl.

About this time of year it is pleasant to turn to old favorites which lead us out in the sunlight and under the trees. Such are "Root and Meadow" and "Wild Life Near Home," by Sharpi; "Footing it in Franconia," by Tierney; "Little Rivers" and "Fisherman's Luck," by Van Dyke, and "The Kentucky Cardinal," by James Lane Allen.

Birds are now on the wing, and it is time to recall their plumage and habits, that we may be ready to welcome old friends. The following books about birds are in the library:
Abbott, Birds about us, 50c
Birds and nature, 1904, 25c

Woman's Club Home.

The Woman's Club of Glen Ridge held its annual meeting in the parlor of the Congregational Church of that place Tuesday afternoon and started a movement for the purchase of a tract of land and the erection of a home. The club has met in the past in the church parlor and at the homes of members. The membership at present is 330, and as there are many applications pending, it was decided to build. The nucleus of a fund has been subscribed, which it is expected will be increased by an entertainment in the Glen Ridge Assembly Hall, April 30. At that time two plays will be presented, "My Lord in Livin'" and "The Lady Interviewer."

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Marius Belloni; vice-president, Mrs. Henry G. Cordley; recording secretary, Mrs. E. H. Ward; treasurer, Mrs. William H. White; membership committee, Mrs. Frederick A. Scheffer, Miss Martha C. Gallagher and Mrs. Theodore M. Ward.

Each morning—'til the story's old—
The coffee pot is always cold
It's over so when coal you burn
When you use gas, the tables turn.

At Breakfast Time.

There are few things so discouraging as a poor cup of coffee for breakfast. But one can't expect good coffee if the fire won't burn. With coal this happens frequently—with gas never. Turn the stop-cock, apply the match and there you are. The morning coffee is assured. Not only the morning coffee but every meal, every day, is easily cooked on a gas range. Prices, $9.50 to $15.00, $2.00 down; $2.00 a month. Connections Free.
